JCU Trimester: 3 Start Dates a Year
Generally university study takes place in 2 sessions called semesters. This allows for the year to be split into semester 1, and semester 2. Having more than one study session a year allows for enrolment at the beginning of the year, but also in the middle of the year. JCU has introduced Trimesters, which means there are three sessions each year. What this means is that there are more study options and a more flexible approach to study.
JCU offers study periods starting March, July and November. This arrangement allows students to typically complete more subjects per year than a standard semester program operating at many other Australian universities. JCU Brisbane is the only JCU campus in Australia to operate a trimester model. This model enables you to complete your degree faster, join the workforce sooner and save on living costs incurred with longer degree programs. Certificate IV in Aeroskills

Statement of Achievement Towards Certificate IV in Aeroskills

It's important to understand that our Aeroskills course represents the theoretical component of a first but vital step on the way to becoming a qualified Aircraft Maintenance Engineer.

This course will equip you with the hands-on skills and practical knowledge required to assist you in gaining an apprenticeship as an Aircraft Maintenance Engineer.

On successful completion you will receive a Statement of Achievement towards a Certificate IV in Aeroskills with transcripts of academic results. This has the effect of shaving 9 months off a 4 year engineering apprenticeship, reducing that to 3 years and 3 months.

Your ongoing journey to a career that offers a future with limits looks like this...

Avionics
If your interests centre on computers, electronics and electrical control systems, then this is a natural choice for you, as aircraft avionics systems are amongst the most technologically sophisticated and advanced in the world.

Every new aircraft type that comes into service brings with it cutting-edge technology such as fly-by-wire, fly-by-light and even artificial intelligence, so this is a field of science where the tempo of change and discovery is dynamic.

When you choose to specialise in Avionics you'll find Aviation Australia training will put you right at the cutting-edge.

Mechanical
As the name suggests, this specialisation is made-to-order if your passion is for probing the mechanics of engines and associated systems, except here you're learning to work on something bigger than your average V8.

If you elect to go this route, you'll be trained in the skills needed to maintain jet engines, complex aircraft systems and electrical systems, including anti-slid braking and undercarriage systems; canister pressurisation, fuel and pneumatic components, flight controls, hydraulics and more.

Structures
In this area of specialisation, you'll learn all there is to know about maintaining the physical structures that underpin the structural integrity of an aircraft.

As a Structural Aircraft Maintenance Engineer, you will be constructing everything from aerobatic to interior components, working with hi-tech materials such as carbon fibre, keder and aluminum alloys.

By the end of your course you'll have acquired the ability to produce, maintain, modify and repair aircraft using specialist skills that include sheet metal fabrication and bonding of metallic and composite structures.

"The training was excellent.
I would highly recommend Aviation Australia to anyone who was thinking about pursuing a career in Aviation."
