HEALTHCARE is Australia’s fastest growing job sector

Healthcare and Social Assistance has experienced strong growth over the past decade and is Australia’s largest employing industry, with almost 1.4 million workers, or 11.9% of national employment.

It is also the largest employer in regional Australia, with more than half a million jobs outside state capitals.

Over the five years to November 2017, employment is expected to continue to increase strongly, up by 13.0% (or 177,800). This represents more than one fifth of the total number of new jobs.

The industry’s workforce is female dominated (most of the largest occupations have relatively small proportions of males employed). It also has a slightly higher proportion of older workers than the average across all industries.

Workers in the Healthcare and Social Assistance industry are generally highly skilled. Most workers hold post-school qualifications, reflecting the requirements for entry to most of the occupations which are key to the sector. A high proportion of workers are Professionals (almost twice the average for all industries).

Six tips for preparing to study

Starting uni can seem a bit daunting at first, but it’s really not that scary. Here are a few tips to set your students up for success, regardless of which uni they are planning on going to.

1) Are you eligible for financial assistance? In 2013, more than 1,100 undergraduate students at USC received financial support from scholarships, bursaries and prizes worth more than A$1.55 million. Visit the USC website for a full list of scholarships, and take note of the release and application due dates.

2) Plan to get your preferred class times. To get the class times you want, you need to plan and get in early. As soon as you accept your offer in January, you can check the class timetable and enrol in your classes for Semester 1. Use the materials provided in your offer pack to step you through this process.

3) Be prepared. Before you start classes, you can buy your text books and notebooks, and also check out the online student portal (USC username and password needed) so you know your way around.

4) Attend Orientation Week. O-Week is full of academic and social activities - it’s a great way to meet students and staff, make new friends and have some fun! At O-Week you can get a Student Mentor who’ll help you get off to a good start by answering your general questions about uni, give you updates and important info throughout the semester and be a friendly face on campus.

5) Brush up on your academic skills. Every university offers free academic and study support services to help you write and research at a university level.

6) If you need help, just ask. Remember that there is plenty of help, support and assistance

Top graduate returns for newly accredited Law program

Chelsea Wallis, 18, completed her USC Bachelor of Business last year, and is now studying a one-semester Graduate Certificate in Arts while she awaits enrolment in USC’s Law program in 2014.
“My goal is to be in the first cohort of USC’s new Bachelor of Laws (Graduate Entry) next year. I think it’s a spectacular opportunity to be part of the program as it’s built from the ground up.

USC recently received accreditation from the Legal Practitioners Admissions Board of Queensland for its suite of Law degrees to be introduced in 2014.

This means USC’s Bachelor of Laws programs, as well as its seven double degree Laws programs, are now approved academic qualifications for entry into the legal profession in Australia.

At the helm of these programs are Professor Neil Rees and Professor Anne Rees, a husband and wife who were both formerly Deans of Law at the University of Newcastle.

Learn about the new Law program and watch the USC Law Information Evening session online.

Creative Industries
Bursting with creative flair? World-wide, creative industries is one of the fastest growing, most dynamic and diverse industry employment sectors.

From 2014, students can study the new program locally at USC Sippy Downs where they’ll gain practical experience and professional contacts through internships and projects for industry-based clients, build a professional portfolio and graduate with a range of specialist creative industries skills.

A range of study areas (majors) are on offer, including creative advertising; creative writing; drama; graphic design; 3D design; e-media design; marketing; screen and media studies; serious games development.

For more information about studying Creative Industries, contact USC’s Faculty of Arts and Business.

Resources for your students and their parents
Parents and students are able to access the USC newsletter. They can also gain an insight into uni life by following current students and parents on Facebook.

USC newsletter 'campUSConnect':
Students can sign up to receive the USC electronic newsletter, jam packed with stories about careers, students and staff, courses and programs and what’s happening right now on campus.

Parents, too, can sign up for their version of the newsletter to find out how to best support their student in planning for their future studies. The USC website is also filled with information and resources to help parents prepare their students and themselves for the transition from school to university.

9. Year 12 Fee Free Training
Department of Education, Training & Employment

Overview

From 1 January 2014, Year 12 graduates will be able to access fee-free training as part of the Queensland Government’s Great skills. Real opportunities action plan.

The fee-free training will be available for Year 12 graduates for training in high priority qualifications identified by the Queensland Government and industry groups.

The training is available through a range of certificate level III vocational education and training courses, as well as apprenticeships and traineeships.

Why participate?

Fee-free training gives Year 12 graduates a head start on their careers by allowing them to complete a high priority qualification through an apprenticeship, traineeship or selected vocational education and training course without the financial burden of student contribution fees.

Participant eligibility

To be eligible to access fee-free training, individuals must:

- have completed Year 12 in Queensland and hold a Senior Statement issued by the Queensland Studies Authority
- enrol and start training with an approved training provider within 12 months of finishing Year 12
- be a Queensland resident.

Available training

Fee-free training only applies to apprenticeships and traineeships or certificate level III qualifications identified as high priority by the Queensland Government.

High priority qualifications will develop the skills most needed by employers and the Queensland economy, and are based on skill demand, advice from industry, and whether the qualification will lead to employment.

The list of high priority qualifications is online at www.training.qld.gov.au/investing-in-skills/certificate3/students.html.

What does fee-free mean?

The Queensland Government will cover the full cost of training in a high priority qualification delivered under the Year 12 fee-free training initiative. This means participating students will not be required to contribute to the cost of their training.
