5. Careers In Retail
Second Largest Employing Industry

The Retail Trade is Australia’s second largest employing industry, with more than 1.2 million workers, or around one in ten working Australians. Jobs in this sector are in almost every location, with a slightly higher proportion being outside state capital cities than the all industries average.

Half the jobs in this sector are for Sales Workers and the industry provides an ideal entry point to the labour market, offering many jobs which do not require post-school qualifications (almost two in three workers do not hold qualifications). There are also good opportunities for part-time work (around half the workers are employed part-time).

Females comprise 58% of retail employees. 50% of staff work part-time. 31% of employees are between the ages of 15 – 24, with 59% not having a post-school qualification, whilst 12% have a degree and 21% have Cert III or higher VET qualifications.

To help secure retail employment and advancement opportunities higher education qualifications are essential. View source: Australian Jobs 2013 page 23.

So how can students choose a job in retail?

To identify a job in retail sales look to what the student's passion is. Is it technology and gadgets, music, fashion, flowers or plants, healthcare or food, sport, building and renovation? There’s opportunity to enter retail sales in each of these sectors. When best matched to a personality, passion or interest, retail will be rewarding and successful.

When you ask retailers who the best employees are, they'll tell you that they must have these 10 essential strengths.

1. Confidence: The confidence to make eye contact and strike up a conversation with strangers is absolutely essential.
2. Innate friendliness: Customers don’t want to deal with sales associates who have to force themselves to be pleasant and nice.
3. Flexibility: When dealing with the public, things can go wrong. You have to be flexible enough to roll with the punches and think outside the box sometimes.
4. Ability to multitask: Sales associates have to juggle customers and their questions and needs, and at the same time attend to their other store duties.
5. Patience: Dealing with people means that you will have to take the good with the bad. The patience to deal with all types of customers is vital.
6. Articulate: Sales reps must be conversational and have the ability to formulate answers and provide information when asked.
7. Respectful: The customer might not always be right, but she is always the customer. Customers must be treated with respect, even in the most challenging situations.
8. Proactive: It’s never a good idea to wait until a customer is stressed or agitated before offering assistance. Being one step ahead to gauge when someone needs help is the best way to minimize a brewing situation.
9. Positivity: The ability to smile in the face of a long and possibly chaotic day can make a world of difference to customers.
10. Empathy: Being able to look at a situation through the eyes of a customer is an extremely valuable skill that can enable you to provide the highest degree of service.
