CHILD PROTECTION
IS EVERYONE’S BUSINESS
A FREE PARENT INFORMATION NIGHT

Child Protection is something that concerns everyone in the community and as part of Child Protection Week, from 6 to 10 September, Good Shepherd Lutheran College is hosting a series of events and activities to involve and inform the student body, parents and the wider community.

A group of enthusiastic Year 9 Drama students at the College have for a number of months been rehearsing the play, "Burnt", written by playwright, Stephen Davis. This play tells the story of Simon, who is consistently bullied by a school mate. By putting themselves in Simon's place, students learn to have empathy for the victims of bullying and accepting those that are different.

Good Shepherd Lutheran College's program will also see Mr Brett Lee, Internet Safety expert, workshop with Middle and Senior students about the dangers of cyber bullying and ways to enhance their personal cyber safety.

Good Shepherd Student Counsellor, Beryl Morrall, invites everyone in the community to be involved in some way in this important week. "Child Protection really is everybody's business. We owe it to the younger members of our community to be informed and equipped to allow them to safely navigate their way into adulthood."

Maybe you are one of those parents who wonder why some teenagers sail through adolescence, while others seem to encounter quite a bumpy ride. If so, come along to the free 'Evening for Parents' hosted by Good Shepherd Lutheran College and United Synergies on Wednesday, 8 September at 6pm in the College Chapel.

Keynote speaker, Andrew Zanos will share with parents his 28 years of experience with teenagers as a Clinical Therapist and Mental Health Practitioner. Booking is essential to morralb@gslc.qld.edu.au or at the College on 5455 8600.

"Burnt" drama at Good Shepherd Lutheran College.
Free 'Evening for Parents' on Wednesday, 8 September at 6pm in the College Chapel during Child Protection Week.
See related article page 7.