Sitting down to a tasty high tea

An array of gourmet treats served on crisp white tablecloths set the mood for high tea at Good Shepherd Lutheran College recently. Two sittings were conducted as places at the time-honoured tradition were in demand.

The Year 12 hospitality class trialled many recipes in the three week lead-up to the event before settling on the final selection. Staff enjoyed traditional scones with jam and cream, lemon curd tarts, sandwiches, a selection of French toasts and baguettes alongside the student's personal favourite, palmiers.

Hospitality teacher, Trina O'Donnell praised the students.

"Most of the students work outside of school hours in the hospitality field, so their experience in the classroom/kitchen and planning and executing functions such as this definitely augments and reinforces their practices in the workforce," she said.

"The students have done a wonderful job and feedback from those who have attended has been overwhelming."
Sitting down to a tasty high tea

An array of gourmet treats served on crisp white tablecloths set the mood for high tea at Good Shepherd Lutheran College recently. Two sittings were conducted as places at the time-honoured tradition were in demand.

The Year 12 hospitality class trialled many recipes in the three-week lead-up to the event before settling on the final selection. Staff enjoyed traditional scones with jam and cream, lemon curd tarts, sandwiches, a selection of French toasts and baguettes alongside the student’s personal favourite, palmiers.

Hospitality teacher, Trina O’Donnell praised the students.

“Most of the students work outside of school hours in the hospitality field, so their experience in the classroom/kitchen and planning and executing functions such as this definitely augments and reinforces their practices in the workforce,” she said.

“The students have done a wonderful job and feedback from those who have attended has been overwhelming.”