Students ‘Log On’

Each Year 6, 9 and 10 students at Good Shepherd Lutheran College have been issued with a laptop as part of the federal government’s Digital Literacy Laptop Program. Parents, along with the very enthusiastic students, attended an information session after which the students were issued their laptops. Students are able to use their laptops both at home and in the classroom. Use of the computers will be integrated into each lesson of the school day.

Good Shepherd Lutheran College Principal John Mason is very excited about the flexibility the laptop program will afford students of the college. He said, “We have to embrace technologies and programs that will better equip our students to become 21st century learners.”
